Essay Prompt

It should be apparent to you that studying in China also involves studying yourself—a reexamination of who you are and who you might yet be, perhaps in a more penetrating way than you anticipated. Reflecting upon how this extraordinary nation has developed over the centuries—culturally, aesthetically, economically, politically—must surely give one pause to contemplate one’s own role in the world, physically and spiritually.

Write a 700-800 word essay in that same spirit of meditation, reflecting upon how your time in China has changed you thus far, and how you plan to use the changes you already see in yourself in ways to serve others in the coming semester and beyond.

The essay evaluation is conducted blindly. Please be careful not to include identifying factors within your essay (e.g., hometown, home institution, nationality, etc.) where you can avoid it.
